Circolare n. 210/2024

Oggetto: Trasporti internazionali – Pacchetto mobilità – Annullato l’obbligo di ritorno dei veicoli nello Stato membro di stabilimento – Decisione CGUE sulle cause riunite da C-541/20 a C-555/20.

La Corte di Giustizia europea ha pubblicato la propria decisione sulle cause presentate da vari paesi (Lituania, Bulgaria, Romania, Cipro, Ungheria, Malta e Polonia con il supporto di Belgio, Estonia e Lettonia) in merito a diversi aspetti del cd l Pacchetto mobilità adottato nel 2020 (Regolamenti UE nn. 1054/2020 e 1055/2020 e Direttiva UE n. 1057/2020).

In particolare, la Corte ha annullato l’obbligo che impone ai veicoli di ritornare ogni otto settimane presso la sede operativa dell’impresa di trasporto (art.1 par.3 del Regolamento UE n.1055/2020 che modifica l’art.5 par.1 lett.b del Regolamento UE n.1071/2009), poiché “il legislatore dell’Unione non ha dimostrato di disporre di informazioni sufficienti per consentirgli di valutare la proporzionalità di tale misura”.

Sono state peraltro respinte le richieste di annullamento di diverse disposizioni, tra cui quella sul divieto per i conducenti di effettuare il loro periodo di riposo settimanale regolare o compensativo nel veicolo, quella sul periodo di raffreddamento – cd cooling off – di quattro giorni durante il quale, il veicolo deve uscire dal Paese in cui ha effettuato le operazioni di cabotaggio consentite e non può rientrarvi, quella sull’obbligo per le imprese di trasporto di organizzare il lavoro dei loro conducenti in modo tale che siano in grado di ritornare, durante l’orario di lavoro, ogni tre o quattro settimane alla sede operativa dell’impresa o al loro luogo di residenza, per iniziare o trascorrere lì almeno il loro periodo di riposo settimanale regolare o compensativo.

Pertanto, l’impianto del Pacchetto Mobilità è stato sostanzialmente confermato e si fa riserva di tornare sull’argomento per comunicare i successivi aggiornamenti.

PRESS RELEASE No 173/24

Luxembourg, 4 October 2024

Judgment of the Court in Joined Cases C-541/20 to C-555/20 | Lithuania and Others v Parliament and Council (Mobility Package)

The Court broadly confirms the validity of the Mobility Package

However, it annuls the obligation requiring vehicles to return every eight weeks to the operational centre of the transport undertaking, since the EU legislature has not established that it had sufficient information to enable it to assess the proportionality of that measure

Lithuania, Bulgaria, Romania, Cyprus, Hungary, Malta and Poland¹ brought actions for annulment before the Court of Justice against the Mobility Package,² adopted by the European Union legislator, that is to say the Parliament and the Council,³ in 2020.

Those Member States dispute in particular:

1. the prohibition on drivers taking their regular⁴ or compensatory⁵ weekly rest period in the vehicle;⁶
2. the obligation on transport undertakings to organise the work of their drivers in such a way that they are able to return, during working hours,⁷ every three or four weeks⁸ to the operational centre of the undertaking or their place of residence, to start or spend at least their regular or compensatory weekly rest period there;
3. the bringing forward⁹ of the date of entry into force of the obligation to install second generation intelligent tachographs and, in general, the setting of the date of entry into force of the abovementioned prohibition and obligation;
4. the obligation for vehicles used for international transport to return to an operational centre situated in the Member State of establishment of the transport undertaking concerned every eight weeks;
5. the four-day waiting period during which, following a cabotage cycle¹⁰ carried out in a host Member State, (non-resident) hauliers are not allowed to carry out cabotage operations with the same vehicle in the same Member State;
6. the classification of drivers as 'posted workers' when they carry out cabotage operations, transport operations from one Member State to another where neither is the Member State of establishment of the transport undertaking (so-called 'cross trade' operations)¹¹ or certain combined transport operations,¹² so that they benefit from the terms and conditions of employment in force in the host Member State, in particular as regards remuneration.¹³

By today's judgment, the Court dismisses the actions, except in so far as they are directed against the obligation relating to the return of vehicles, which it annuls.¹⁴ The Parliament and the Council have not established that they had sufficient information at their disposal when that measure was adopted to enable them to assess its proportionality.

For the rest, the Court rejects the arguments of the applicant Member States relating in particular to the principles of proportionality, equal treatment and non-discrimination, the common transport policy, the freedom to provide services, the freedom of establishment, the free movement of goods, the principles of legal certainty and the protection of legitimate expectations and the protection of the environment. It considers that the EU legislature did not manifestly exceed the limits of its broad discretion in the matter.

The Court points out that the freedom to provide services in the field of transport is subject to a special regime. Transport undertakings have a right freely to provide services only in so far as that right has been granted to them by measures adopted by the EU legislature, such as those falling within the scope of the Mobility Package. Moreover, this package of measures does not prohibit transport undertakings from exercising freedom of establishment by setting up subsidiaries in the Member States in which they intend to provide transport services and thus establishing themselves more closely to the actual demand for their services.

The Court also holds that, by the Mobility Package, the EU legislature sought to strike a new balance between the various interests involved, namely, in particular, the interest of drivers in better social conditions of work and the interest of employers in carrying out their transport activities under fair commercial conditions. The road transport sector must thus become safer, more effective and more socially responsible.

The EU legislature was entitled to consider that, in view of that necessary rebalancing, increased social protection for drivers could result in an increase in the costs borne by certain transport undertakings. The rules adopted for that purpose are proportionate to the objective pursued. Moreover, they apply without distinction throughout the European Union and do not discriminate against transport undertakings established in Member States allegedly situated 'on the periphery of the Union'. If those rules have a greater impact on certain undertakings, that is because they opted for an economic operating model consisting of providing most, if not all, of their services to recipients established in Member States distant from their Member State of establishment.

As regards the prohibition on taking the regular or compensatory weekly rest period in the vehicle, that prohibition is not new, but already followed from the earlier legislation as interpreted by the Court.¹⁵

The obligation for transport undertakings to allow drivers to return regularly to the operational centre of the undertaking or their place of residence to start or spend at least their regular or compensatory weekly rest period does not prevent drivers from choosing for themselves the place where they wish to take their rest period. Moreover, undertakings can combine that return with a return of the vehicles to their operational centre as part of their usual activities or organise it by means of public transport, so that that obligation does not necessarily have negative consequences for the environment.

As regards the rules on posting, the EU legislature took into account, for each type of road transport operation, the link between the service provided and either the host Member State or the Member State of establishment, in order to strike a fair balance between the various interests involved. Those rules have not, as regards cabotage operations, been amended by the Mobility Package and already derived, in essence, from the previous regulatory framework as regards 'cross trade' operations.

Lastly, the Court notes that, by the Mobility Package, the EU legislature also struck a new balance that took into account the interests of the various transport undertakings by remedying the difficulties that arose in the application of Regulation No 1072/2009¹⁶ due to practices contrary to the temporary nature of cabotage operations.

Thus, as regards, more specifically, the waiting period for cabotage, it points out that that period is intended, in accordance with the objective already pursued by the earlier legislation, to ensure that cabotage operations are not carried out in such a way as to create a permanent or continuous activity in the host Member State. That period is limited to prohibiting cabotage operations in the same host Member State during that period, but does not prevent other transport operations, such as international carriage operations, either to the Member State of establishment or to other Member States, followed, as the case may be, by cabotage operations in those other Member States.

NOTE: An action for annulment seeks the annulment of acts of the institutions of the European Union that are contrary to EU law. The Member States, the European institutions and individuals may, under certain conditions, bring an action for annulment before the Court of Justice or the General Court. If the action is well founded, the act is annulled. The institution concerned must fill any legal vacuum created by the annulment of the act.

⁴ Of at least 45 hours.

⁷ The transport undertaking must, in principle, organise the driver's return at its own expense, unless the driver occasionally chooses not to return.

⁹ By nine and a half years or by nine years, depending on the type of tachograph in the vehicle.

¹⁴ More specifically, the Court annulled point 3 of Article 1 of Regulation 2020/1055, which lays down this obligation.
